

Coral may look like a rock or plant, but it's actually made up of thousands of tiny soft bodied animals that look like jellyfish called polyps. These polyps make coral for their homes. Coral reefs also provide homes for about 25% of all marine life, despite covering less than 1% of the ocean floor.

How many creatures can you count hiding in the coral?

